- Joe Dumesnil
 - Managing Director and Partner, Overland Oil and Gas.

Study Group Overview

Fee acreage is an asset class unique to the United States. Institutional interest in Mineral and Royalties on fee acreage has gained over the last 10 years as the physical endowment in acreage has been maximized on unconventional resources. Many investors see it as one of the safest ways to play the oil and gas sector. This talk aims to bring perspective on the topic of minerals and royalties. What, why, and where are the risks and the returns? How are minerals different as an asset class? What can and cannot be controlled in the space? These questions and more are something we will discuss as we all try to leave the study group a little more educated about this unique asset class.
