ESG for Petroleum Engineers: Without the Hot Air

 - 1513 Wynkoop Street, Denver, CO 80202

Date

Speaker

- Christiaan Luca, Community Wisdom Partners

Session Overview

Environmental, Social and Governance (ESG) continues to gain attention and become a necessary condition for funding by shareholders and banks. Unfortunately, ESG has become clouded in an overload of jargon, requirements and metrics; in addition, it is now also becoming politicized. This lecture shows that ESG has been developing since the start of the industrial revolution and is here to stay. The capital markets have converged on a handful of industry standards that are almost universally accepted and applied by all major financial organizations. These standards are risk and value-based, and project-focused. As such they are a blessing in disguise: although elaborate and demanding, they provide a level playing field, and can be easily integrated in existing business processes. ESG scrutiny is moving from auditing of policies and manuals to carrying out due diligence on actual implementation in the field. In other words, petroleum engineers, project and operations managers have become part of ESG compliance.
